International Summer School for Advanced Studies 2023

Space + Common Good
Social vulnerability, Active Communities, Self-built practices

Part I
19 and 26 July, Online

Part II
1 – 3 September, Pavia

Part III
4 – 10 September, Brescia

The ISS aims at offering an opportunity for design practice and reflection on the tools of architecture and urbanism, starting from the specificities of the place and the subjects involved. The workshop will range from reading the place, interacting with the subjects who live there, listening to and understanding the questions, designing, and presenting a solution, to the concrete realisation of an everyday object through the reuse of waste materials (bins, dustpans, plastic bottles, etc.) in a “ready-made” key.

The course has two main objectives. Firstly, the ISS proposes a co-design experience to give students the opportunity to experience the relationship with the client, the collaboration between subjects with different competence roles. Secondly, the ISS aims at bringing students closer to architectural practices and the reading of urban space, combining the background of design culture acquired during university studies with considerations of undeniable topicality linked to a “circular” and “sustainable” approach to the reuse of materials.
