The increasing presence of energy storage creates new opportunities for energy traders. In order to take advantage of storage, a trader has to select a policy for making decisions about charging or discharging. In this talk we propose a universal policy for energy trading that integrates all fundamental policy classes. We then present an online learning approach to optimize the policy during the process of energy trading.